DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 03/13/2009 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Koch (U.S. Patent No. 640,308) in view of Yamada et al. (U.S. Patent No. 4,304,157).

Koch discloses an instrument for holding an intervertebral spacer, the instrument comprising a shaft having a proximal end forming a handle (A), and a distal end forming a claw subassembly; the claw subassembly including a first pincer (B) which is fixed at the distal end of the shaft and a second pincer (C) which is pivotally coupled with the first pincer for rotating into and out of spacer holding association with the first pincer; and an actuation mechanism (I) for selectively rotating the second pincer, wherein the first and second pincers have opposing inner curved surfaces that extend to a distal-most end of the instrument. A sliding element (e, g) is mounted to the shaft and is selectively movable by pushing, in at least a distal direction by a force sufficient to overcome the bias of the second pincer, and the second pincer including a tapered surface which is contacted by a corresponding surface of the sliding member (see marked-up figure below). The contacting causes the second pincer to pivot relative the first pincer.

Koch discloses the claimed invention except for the pincers being biased outwardly.

Yamada et al. discloses biasing in tools to make the tool readily useable without any preparatory procedure.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to construct the tool of Koch with pincers biased in view of Yamada et al. in order to make the tool readily useable without any preparatory procedure.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 6-11 are allowed.

Claims 2-3, 5 and 12 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments see pages 6-7, filed 03/13/2009, with respect to claims 1-9 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection of claim 1-9 under Kelly (U.S. 5,122,130) has been withdrawn. As discussed during the interview on 3/13/2009, the first pincer of Kelly is not "in a fixed position relative the said shaft." While the first pincer may be considered "fixed" or attached, its position relative the shaft is not "fixed."

Applicant's arguments, see page 8, filed 03/13/2009, with respect to claims 6-11 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection of claims 6-11 under Koch (U.S. 640,308) in view of Yamada et al. (U.S. 4,304,157) has been withdrawn. In particular, the sliding element of Koch is not translatable into and out of contact with the tapered surface.

Applicant's arguments other filed 03/13/2009 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. As seen in the above marked-up figure, Koch does disclose a tapered surface "D." The pin "e," which can be considered part of the sliding element, is in contact with surface 'D.'

In addition, Applicant argues that the structure of Koch would not benefit from having a second pincer biased. The examiner respectfully disagrees. Biasing tools is well known in the art, and biasing makes tools more readily useable.

The rejection is deemed proper.
